

To the directors and officers of the Harvard Schools Trust,

Our morning with Focus Your Locus was a success and has helped us to lay a foundation for improved culture within the seventh grade. Justin McGlamery, who led the program, is incredibly skilled at expressing overarching social principles in simple phrases that are easy for students to remember and internalize. Throughout the morning those principles were explored and reinforced as students worked together on challenges and puzzles that connect directly to behavioral expectations that we promote at Bromfield. The kids laughed, debated, argued at times, and communicated. Thank you very much for supporting our effort to reverse negative social dynamics among the 7th grade class!

With appreciation,

The 7th Grade Team
